
STRONG TOWNS

The Mission of Strong Towns is to support a model of development that allows America's cities, towns and neighborhoods to grow financially strong and resilient.

In our work, we ask crucial and difficult questions about today's cities:

- Why are our governments so short of resources despite decades of growth?
- Why do we struggle at the local level just to maintain our basic infrastructure?
- What do we do now that the economy has changed so dramatically?

Strong Towns is a nonprofit media organization and a national movement for change. We promote a vision of the future American city that is financially resilient, designed to adapt to feedback, and built as much as possible at the personal scale. We lead an evolving conversation about the Strong Towns approach and shine the spotlight on real people, cities, and towns who are working to realize it all over America.

Nonpartisan and made up of supporters from diverse professional and nonprofessional backgrounds, we spread our message via daily online content, weekly podcasts, live events across the nation, and by constantly working to connect members of our movement from across the world.
